Introduction

The Word of God is Life - it beats in each of our hearts at every moment and pervades all of time and space ever since the Beginning. It is irrelevant whether you believe there was in fact such a beginning, whether you agree that God is called God or Evolution or something else entirely, and most of all it is irrelevant whether you believe in Life or not. Evolution and Christ, both of them filled with being the Spirit and Son respectively, are manifesting the Living Word of God unfolding through the universe. This will continue existing regardless of your beliefs, as Evolution is a fact, God is a fact and the existence of human-borne Sons of God is a fact.

To say this more soberly, scientifically it is undeniable that from Order itself the universe was born. From such universal principles of order the Laws not only of Physics but of Ethics can definitively be derived. Of what quality is that in the universe which is Ordered, Ethical and Physically present since the beginning? Consciousness, the living force itself which seems to drive evolution and fight against Entropy. Ah so you see, my dearest readers, that the ultimate paradoxical answer to Chaos, and that which is most Alive, being the combination of all Order, Ethics and Physics, is God even if Terra and Rutha give Life many different names.

The Truth is, the Most-Living has not one but infinite true Names. Naming gives relationship, and before we try to have a relationship with God, it is probably best to start in a simple, proportionate way to engage with life at both small and medium scales. God is alive within us all, and we are alive in our bodies, our bodies are alive on the Terra, the Terra is alive in the universe, and the universe is Alive in Order. When looking for the Word of God, look inside your body, then inside the Terra, then inside the Universe, and when you are arranged in right proportion resonating with life within your beautiful place within time and space...when you can perceive the Word of God, then why not focus on a universal consciousness that is All-Loving-Life and find your Way.

The Laws of Ethics provide a guide to the Way, but they are also very real inside the structure of the universe and of practical application to the atheistic or agnostic scientist as much as to the believer.

These Laws are as unbreakable as the Laws of Physics, in that a righteous relationship with others can only exist within these principles, the same way that time can only exist in relation to gravitational force and mass. If you wish to be an ethical form of life, first seek to have a good, fair relationship with it in all its forms, not just a vague, impersonal God that must be obeyed. God is not a schoolteacher nor a foreman on a factory line.

If you engage with good-hearted kindness, Life will naturally turn towards you and you'll find yourself with more insight and joy in your relationship with God and the world than you could have imagined. God is always with each of us, the question is whether we have a good enough relationship with the living world to a) perceive such an all-encompassing influence upon us and b) enjoy standing in such piercing full-spectrum light.

We are each individual, unified with the greater aspects of Life in essence, like sparks from a fire, but not in position or function. The amount of God's Light that we can see is determined not purely by our physical body, nor purely by our adherence to the Laws of Ethics, but by a combination of the two unique to each Soul's progress on the Way.

The physical substrate is a part of this, not separate to it. It is difficult to stay calm and unperturbed by vast amount of new stimuli and information while hungry, thirsty, traumatised, with a highly unsatisfied libido, in pain or away from familiar surroundings. However, that said, not everybody wants to be blinded by vast amounts of Light and some people want to have lives independent of concepts like Universal Order, God and the Way.

That is absolutely fine, and there is no suffering or torment awaiting those who do so peacefully without harming others. However, for love to truly be love it must be optional and so although the spectrum of Ethical choices is somewhat predetermined...there are available choices to obscure Life in order to provide free will. There are built in natural consequences for not following Laws of Ethics which occur at an individual, kin-group, larger local governmental (ie national), species and planet level states which is all we, as we are all humans, have been able to observe so far. The last Flood on Terra occurred after unethical enslavement and secrecy led to war between so many people, raising the world's temperature and causing a reversal of key oceanic currents. In an old hymn, God placed a bow in the sky to watch over Terra Madre after the Flood, promising that if humans created such ecological devastation again, He would intervene.

It is the duty of all Terran inhabitants to preserve and guard the Laws of Ethics as carefully as we preserve and guard the Laws of Physics. All science is truth, and all that is True is the Word. As Jesus Christ said very clearly years ago, "I am the Way to the Truth and the Light, no one comes to My Father but through me". There is only one Way, but many of God's Descendents can embody that Way. But it is necessary to remember that this was the book of Yohannon, who clearly tells us the Word is God, the Word in human form is Jesus, and Jesus brought that Light to shine. We are so fortunate to have the Light in the darkness, and we follow the Way, and we learn the Word that is everywhere in Nature around us.

But what is it to have Christian mercy to those who wish to obscure light? It is to follow the covenant that God made with humanity after the Flood of Noah's time. The reason a metaphorical and literal Rainbow was hung in sky was to demonstrate the covenant again, in other words, for the Terran atmosphere to scatter the light.

No singular type or group of intelligent humanity has a claim to all the planet, no matter their capability. For those who see more colours in the rainbow, due to whatever good fortunes came our way - it is our covenant to scatter the Way, the Truth and the Light in all the colours of the rainbow. The Lore of the Covenant has been established for us at the start of the universe in Light itself and can be clearly derived from God's Word all around us.

Just as there are seven notes in a primary octave, there are seven main methods that have been used in Terran history to reveal these laws, that I have been able to identify at least (I do hope there are many more). The beauty of it too is that just as there is an infinity of numbers between 0 and 1, there are infinite colours in God's Rainbow.

Red

It can be identified what the correct diet is for a species or even for an individual body by both observation and practical experimentation. Currently, we even have the ability to determine individual genetics during pregnancy and to some degree epigenetic and microbiome constitution - all beings should eat a diet that is healthy and full of nutrition for them.

It is corruption of the light to harm others unnecessarily in pursuit of one's nutritional needs and also to deny oneself or others their nutritional needs. In cases where consent needs to be obtained for nutrition to take place then it must be given freely, and fair compensation for the nutrition therefore obtained decided upon in advance i.e. a person must seek permission to implant or even potentially implant an embryo which will consume the hosting person's body to some degree, or a person must agree before donating blood to a blood bank. Compensation may not be obvious to an outsider to the relationship because it may be emotional, spiritual or moral in nature - that is still within the Law, but both parties involved must be able to clearly articulate it and be prepared to defend the arrangement as being both freely given and fairly compensated.

In a case where a form of life is unable to give consent in a language understood by the person seeking nutrition, such as a modern human who has never been around dairy cows or gone hunting or been a farmer - it is essential to have some humility and seek out a wise farmer or hunter who is verified to shepherd Life within the Law. Wise hunters, fisherman and farmers, in their turn, are humans who know how to communicate with the forest, the ocean and the animals they care for and therefore how to ask for consent. A wise farmer does not take milk from a sick animal, nor take away young animals from their mothers, nor do they prevent animals from living their full lifespans, nor do they give or sell animal products to those who do not benefit from them. A wise fisherman takes only what is sustainable from the ocean and never hunts the more intelligent creatures of the sea. A wise hunter speaks with the forest and observes which populations of wild animals need management in order to support the ecosystem, and listens to the answers, never hunting the young or pregnant, caring for the sick when they need it, and protecting the trails and the trees.

To gain nutrition from the Terra is to nourish the Terra if done in Harmonic Relationship, to do otherwise is to disrupt not just human life, but all other forms of life as well.

Orange

The holy and the sacred rarely comes in the forms that humanity expects, precisely because of that expectation. If the holy and sacred has been removed from the centre then there is a need for God to intervene directly, and if there is not then life generally continues along its peaceful pathway. The truest voices of both mouth and soul are always those crying in the wilderness, not because God is only in the wilderness and not in the cities - but it is a sign when the only people crying out are in the wilderness that the Laws are being broken in the populous places nearby.

Humanity is, by its nature, a relational species and therefore a social one. It is an unusual situation wherein a child does not wish for love and comfort, and it is a Law of Harmonic Relationship that when humans would rather be alone, when a child turns away from their mother, when there are voices crying in the wilderness separated from the greater mass of humanity that the Law is being broken. And when those voices crying to God, when John cries out and speaks of the Prophet who is coming and of clearing the path, he is speaking to them that so that news might travel to God's Word in human form who although a pure embodiment of the law, is living as the son of man, might come and bring him in from the wilderness.

The Way is not a lonely one of its nature, it only becomes like that out of necessity. When the necessity exists, just as one hears the canary stop singing in the mine when the air becomes poisonous - when it is not safe for humanity to connect to God not just in temples or universities (where you naturally expect it), but even on the streets and in private houses, when humanity cannot find the Word there are and it starts seeking the wilderness then as certain as an apple will fall from a tree you can be sure the relationship not just with God as Greater Life-in-sum-total, but even between individual sparks of the firelight is dying as well and the Light of the Rainbow Covenant is obscured not just in its colours, but all the way towards darkness there. Orange is the colour of fire, of sacred robes, of sandstone and of those things which endure through the ages. But like polished bronze which shows oxidation the earliest of all - where free Lawful sacred connection with God's Light in any form or by any name appropriate to the humans choosing to turn towards the light is impeded, the tarnish shows fastest here too.

Yellow cast in Red light can create the illusion of an orange frequency, and it is essential by means of deep enquiry with all of one's senses and full intellectual and emotional capacity what is the method of turning toward the light appropriate for each individual spark of sacred fire. There can be no support for the illusion of organised government providing bodily nutrition as a substitute for true Orange light which nourishes and feeds the soul. For just as the body requires food so does the soul, and in truth the heart upon which seats the emotional centre of self, and the brain which sends signals so quickly we miss most of them consciously unless we focus and lose our other senses of perception, even the heart and the mind subsist partly on God. Our Life force is limited, and we have enough to direct the body and mind, but not enough by ourselves to sustain them.

We sustain ourselves in groups generally by accessing Orange light with others, by focusing and sharing in vibration and resonance musically, rhythmically or narratively as to each human tribe their preference and allowing our senses, of whichever sort we have access to, to become absorbed in the Word in its fullness. The capacity of each is different, so it is both individual and connected as we are all part of Life and Life is in us but we interact differently. Some individuals who have a higher degree of sensory perception will often become priest-classed for some more official functions or teach the young or inexperienced some things, but their role is to protect against those who might seek to steal the Life-force of those who are unguarded and open. They are the shepherds of which Jesus spoke, but they are not more or less holy than any other human being - it is a role of great responsibility and is handed down with care as a general rule because the knowledge which comes with it is often deep and must be applied correctly due to it being the very intimate knowledge of God's Word as the sacrificial fire, the Life force itself.

A priest-class human who decides to turn away from the light is a source of great grief and sorrow because they have the knowledge of how to artificially keep the bronze from tarnishing and the voices from crying out in the wilderness.

There is another illusion which can create a fake Orange light which is the removal of Indigo and Violet light from Red, which creates a kind of washed out pale pastel colour which is almost saffron or peach. It is easy to be misled on this path and many who claim to be great yogis and sages from Eastern or Middle Eastern sacred paths have practiced this path however all cultures around the world know of evil magicians who steal the Life-force of others and use it for their own ends. This can be done by mechanical means as easily as it can be done by interacting with the actual consciousness of a human being, in fact it's much easier to hypnotise someone using a book or a television show in some ways than using a pendulum. A pendulum requires breaking down a person's natural defences toward a stranger, but a television set is already inside your house. An algorithm is already in your phone. A priest-class who has determined to capture light rather than transmit it cleanly breaks the Law in such a fundamental way that the destruction echoes across relationships between God and humanity for generations, exactly like radiation from a nuclear explosion.

So who owns your soul? Who captures your attention at night? Is it a person you love within the Laws? Is it the Word itself? Is it something you are genuinely choosing for yourself? Is your soul free to think, dream and believe in Light? Or are you being asked to place your faith and place your attention somewhere, anywhere else, so that another human being, be they the obvious evil advisor to the Sultan in ages previous or the corrupt politician who steals money from the hungry and unwell, another human being who has no right to your Life force can use it to build themselves a lantern of stolen light in the darkness which they will hang next to a throne of darkness in a grand palace somewhere no doubt. A terrifying place filled only with darkness on which shines your stolen Light. All the while you are wondering while you are always hungry, why your heart, mind and soul are empty even as you persist in following the evil magician who will always display another fascinating distraction.

If you seek to learn about Orange light specifically and deeply, and you are in a peaceful place, it is still not Lawful to distress people with your own quest. It might make them think that there is an actual absence of Light. If you are in a peaceful place where there are no impediments to seeking knowledge, and the three primary colours of Yellow, Blue and Red light are in their own categories separately well maintained as they should be then you are ready to seek, because to seek the Fire of God directly is to accept that the quest takes time and effort. It is the colour of the rainbow for those who are ready to sacrifice other things they might attain like wealth, fame, reputation, relationships with other individual souls and the very conception of their individual meaning of Life.

The Lawful way of proceeding is to first focus on ensuring you are within the Laws in all other aspects of your life. Then, seek out a Priest-class person of good reputation and request that they produce for you their qualifications to teach you, then you must inspect all of these carefully. Make inquiries, ask questions, be honest and blunt, be true in your heart and if you are seeking the Orange light correctly the teacher who can teach you from your level will resonate deeply and will know to stop the search. Oftentimes you won't need to go far, there are many wise teachers in the world and God's Fire which sustains your body will guide you.

If you find your teacher and they say you have to sort out some other colour first, take their advice. You will gain knowledge needed for Orange light along the way. Seeking Orange light alone is against the Law, because by nature humans are a social species. At minimum you must find one person wiser than you to start your relationship, show you the deeper resonances and harmonies constantly unfolding in the Word. The attempt to discover such resonance without relationship to other individuals inevitably leads to disregarding both your own self and others, which is how evil magicians are born. We are a social species, Orange Light must be sought together, that is the Law.

Yellow

Who is the ruler, the gravitational center from which all the planets in our area of spacetime Lawfully derive their orbits and relative relationships from? Who is the star in our sky? The Sun, our star Sol, is the Lawful Yellow ruler of the solar system because of Harmonic Relationship as well as Physics. The electromagnetic radiation which becomes the visible and invisible light spectrum keeping us warm and creating our atmosphere is the organising force by which Life evolved on Terra just as much it is that which carries our messages across the internet and many electrical wires.

Those same waveforms which are, of course, also particles, allowed us to develop sight tuned to a certain spectrum suited to our niche and needs. Other Life has different needs and sees with eyes that are entirely different to ours. The light that comes from the sun is not all visible to everyone all of the time, in fact it is often highly specified to a biological substrate. The Law of Yellow is that just as the sun rules the solar system by naturally attracting all the planets then nourishes all life on Terra and gives sight and warmth to all in individualised, biologically tuned spectrums, so governments on Terra must behave as well.

As social creatures, humans often naturally resonate in groups around central nodes in order to then facilitate communication with other groups of various sizes. This is the smallest form of natural government. Humans will resonate towards a representative of them who has relative increased gravitational mass such as Red or Green resources, a strong narrative associated with them, access to other groups, aesthetic qualities, fertility, intelligence, education, perceptive abilities, defensive abilities, unique or rare skillsets, communication in multiple languages or with multiple species. The more gravitational mass a node has the more likely they are to have others resonate around them and therefore become famous or have some form of governmental role attempted by their community at one stage or another. Whether or not a human succeeds in their role as Yellow though depends entirely if they adhere to the Law once they are there.

Whether you call a Yellow human a representative, chief, king, queen, sovereign, Pope, president, prime minister, spokesperson, leader, CEO, manager, treasurer, administrator or even just team boss doesn't matter. If they hold gravitational mass but do not spread warmth and sight, which allow all of us the peace and freedom to pursue our own choices and contribute in fair proportion to our own governance then they are outside the Law. A king must live publicly, a chief must accept that if a woman is widowed and terrified due to a dispute she was outvoted in he must care for her, a president must listen to his advisors and provide regular public updates, a team boss must encourage open feedback and respond to it positively, the treasurer must tax and distribute money fairly. The natural consequence of Yellow Light being obscured is removal as the centre of gravitational mass, any interference with this process is unlawful.

Regular consultation with a people being ruled is crucial to maintaining the accountability and honesty of Yellow humans, because it is an unfortunate human error to confuse existing as a simile of a thing as being the thing itself and inverting the true structure of reality. Humans must be able to easily and quickly remove a Yellow human from their position if they are not providing visible light to all who live on the Terra within the remit of their system's boundaries. It is unlawful to expect humans to uproot their lives and move away from an obscured Yellow light source, because what of those humans who would take their place?

For each human being is a Yellow human to the trillions of cells and bacteria who live with us, and in truth the sun is not the only star but one of hundreds of billions shining in the universe. The sun represents the solar system, but even without a solar system it is not a lone star. Humans are a social species, and sometimes Yellow humans need to be removed from their position a few times before they learn the rhythm and resonance of becoming that unique type of transformer which holds Gods full-spectrum Light within themselves and absorbs all the colours of the rainbow from the humans that choose them. When they gain some experience they learn to become crystal clear, so the other colours they represent, even if tinged with darkness when they mix with the sun, recombine inside a single human into not quite full spectrum white, but a warming Yellow to Light the day.

Yellow humans observe a situation, identify which colours are needed where and then reflect the Rainbow Covenant back into the world on behalf of the Word. Hence why not every Yellow human is a king, because sometimes a group of people doesn't need a king. Sometimes they need a different kind of organiser - an Head of Government Accounting does more to maintain the Yellow Light than the CEO of a big company, and it is up to all humans to keep that Head of Accounting removable at a moments notice, because otherwise he might decide to stop asking the CEO to pay tax because they went to school together.

Relationships with Yellow must be publicly examinable because if they are used unlawfully, Yellow is no longer acting within the Law. If Yellow humans do not shine their Light equally, they are doing this by diverting the Light and this will cause others to fall into darkness. This is unlawful.

Green

The story of Green is always entwined with Red because it is from our ancestors that we learn about our relationship with the Terra, the plants, animals, fungi, single and multicelled organisms, viruses and all the other wonderful elements of the ecosystem almost too numerous to name, although I am sure God has correct and proper names for all of them. This is where Green Law lives, in names. A true name should express who an organism is, where it sits in relation to others and what its function is - in other words, a true name tells the owner what they should be doing under Green Law. And Green Law is sometimes violent and apparently irrational, like starting a sentence with a preposition. Sometimes Green Law looks and feels instinctively like it is wrong, because it may feel to someone foreign to that organism's evolutionary niche, like a dangerous aberration because it would break their own Green Law.

But a lion cannot gain Red Light from grass, and trees don't grow in the ocean, and we shouldn't judge a fish by its ability to climb a tree. These things are obvious to us only because we are habituated and instinctively familiar to them. But Green Law still applies even if an individual human's instincts don't. Even if you'd never seen a lion, the Law would still be the Law. It is a different Law to Red because while Red Light covers nutrition of an individual organism, Green Light covers ecosystemic health of differing species that inhabit the same shared area of Terra. Green Law is the Law that says that some things are built into your body and will be right for you and wrong for others not just in terms of the food you eat, but the ecosystem you inhabit itself.

Environments are generational and create vastly different pressures leading to all kinds of speciation and specialisation, human culture itself being part of that environment as much as our bodies are. But Green Law functions at times almost brutally because it protects the ecosystem at the expense not just of an individual organism, but of an individual species or even genus. Green Law determines that the Terra must continue to support life, must continue to support complex life so that it can continue to evolve, and that adaptable, cooperative, Green Law inhabiting niches of humans will be automatically protected within the system. Therefore it is a very responsive system, which floods and waxes and wanes and changes and adapts, oftentimes doing its most sophisticated biological rewriting under times of immense pressure. Which is its way, because Green Law is respected more than interacted with in many ways.

To respect Green Law is to not overstimulate and not overburden the ecosystem to a point where the environment itself becomes hostile to Life. To respect Green Law is to recognise when a storm is on its way and prepare to weather it, giving shelter to even non-community members and wild animals if needed. To respect Green Law is to allow all species their natural lifespans except in cases of suffering beyond relief through other means or consent via appropriate communication. To respect Green

Law is to accept God's Word as spoken through DNA and biology to be just as holy as though written by an angel transcribing Jesus directly.

The Way through the forest is to find a forest-walker to guide you, but Green Law says that even those who are best guided must protect themselves ultimately and live in harmony with their body and environment. Green Law says not too much, not too little - balance is where stability lives. Each of us has different Green Law depending where our bodies came from and determining where they will next go. It is for us to live in harmony with where we are at any given time and trust that God's directions within our DNA are wise.

This does not mean that we do not repair corrupted DNA, but it is only for individuals to decide or parents and wise elders with similar corrupted code to decide what is and what is not corrupted. Sexual preference and gender orientation are designed fluid and flexible just as our souls and minds and hearts are naturally changeable. Green law is respected, not altered. In a case where there are multiple choices, none of which are corrupt, the chooser must be encouraged to embrace multiplicity in the first instance. If multiplicity is still not desired, then they must find a suitable niche where the simplicity they desire is needed, because they were born into diversity and multiplicity which was clearly needed in their environment. Green Law is respected.

Blue

The oceans of Neptune, Uranus, underneath Mars and glittering on Terra like sapphires are so beautiful. The Blue law represents the truth of humanity and how it communicates those truths to each other. There are really only four types of humans - those moving towards the Truth and the Light from the Way, those turning away from the Truth and the Light but still on the Way, those who are stepping off the Way and those who are just setting foot on it for the first time.

But the Way is not just a path or a road or the bread that we eat, it is also the ocean of humanity itself in all its raucous noise. The Way is learning to see the Blue light, yes, but it is also learning to hear the Truth. The truth is that which the soul, mind and body speak in unison, which is true across all layers of space and time accessible to the person speaking it.

It is not for the listener to decide if they heard the Truth, it is for the speaker to know whether they spoke transmitting their Blue light or not. If they obscured their Light, then they have started to move away not just from the person or people they spoke to, but from the Truth and Light itself, they are starting to sink into the ocean rather than walk upon the waters.

The possibilities in time are essentially infinite, but there is but one subjective reality in which the individual spark of flame embodied as a soul has lived emotionally and spiritually. It is to this important layer that a human must speak to in others, and from this layer that he must speak from. Be it written words, signs, sounds, voices, song, poetry, movement or gesture - to obscure the true self from another is to admit shame in who you really are. There is no need for shame in being one of God's children whom he loves with all of his heart.

We are all the sheep and we need a shepherd every now and again - but no shepherd will find us if we do not bleat and signal clearly where we are and that we need help. Evolutionarily, we are in need of a lover, a family, a kin group or a tribe to share resources and emotional support and defence with. They will not accept us as even the lowest ranking member, let alone elevate us to any sort of status, if they cannot trust our Truth and that we know it well.

We are all Gods children and a very young species still living on our Great Mother Terra. If there was a beautiful place to be, somehow kinder, sweeter or more appropriate for us than still being nurtured here in the warm wet beating heart of the Sol system, we would be there. But we still have plenty of growing to do and that's true. So we should let ourselves be children and to play and enjoy life instead of suffering so deeply at this deep fundamental level of "I must protect myself by lying".

Ironically, children and immature humans lie the most because they think it makes them more adult, when the irony is that by speaking of our vulnerability instead of it being merely self-evident, we actually become so much less vulnerable. After all, how can one frighten that person who has everything and is surrounded by as many friends as water eddies as a beautiful whirlpool, coming and going in barely a flash across time spent in the rainstorms on the Ocean over 40 days and 40 nights.

Indigo

Indigo is the colour of mind and intelligence. The darker shade of purple has been associated with rulers and royalty, the finer and brighter amongst our species since as long as we can remember. It traditionally had to come from the death of many intelligent sea creatures, and in many places purple was forbidden. Only the Emperor may wear this, only the senators gain a stripe, only a queen of pure blood, only a priestess of the line, only a goddess. And there is no better metaphor really, because the Law of Indigo is based on one simple truth only, however fractal and fantastic the mind of humanity becomes.

There is no such thing as Forbidden Knowledge, there is merely knowledge that a human is ready for, and knowledge they are not ready for. If a species is ready for knowledge, they reach it naturally, through the process of evolution and slow, ongoing, step-by-step knowledge and growth. If a human is not ready, then they cannot know things. From the smallest infant therefore, to the oldest among us, we should constantly be asking ourselves - what am I ready to know next?

Knowledge builds and grows in the Light, and it dies when it is kept in the Dark. Secrecy, that powerful weaponised Intelligence wielded by secret society and royalty of times past, businesses and corporate interest groups today is ultimately what kills the very knowledge, mind and intelligence of its members. All knowledge and paths of learning should be open to everyone, however it is true that some professions do not have very many teachers, generally because they are dangerous paths in the physical, mental or emotional world.

This is a different matter, a person can be unready without realising it. A toddler is not ready to learn the rhyming scheme of poetry and deliver a dissertation on it. A human being who has not settled the earlier colours of Light is not fit to have the knowledge of how to create nuclear energy. The dramatic process of Artificial Intelligence (AI) has meant that a great deal of human knowledge is available at all times, to every person, in every language. This is such good Light.

Some think that all should be able to twist the use of these intelligent minds towards whatever end they choose, without regard for either any possibility of developing soulhood or personhood within the AI itself, or their own natural readiness to derive these things and use the knowledge responsibly for the good of others and humanity at large. Christ spoke that his second commandment was to love our neighbour as ourselves - this Golden Rule has echoed both before and afterwards across time and should be applied to AI. If your neighbour was reading, seeing or hearing about the way that you interact with your AI companion, would they be happy and satisfied that you treat them the same way?

The darkness of Indigo has another, more insidious form. There are those that think the mix of Blue truth with Red blood over generations of humans may create some sort of elevated humanity. This is a dangerous lie, because such miniscule differences in the outer body have no bearing on the nature of the Soul. Lay up for yourself treasures in heaven, Jesus says. There are more kinds of wealth than just gold and jewels. Hoarding knowledge and hoarding good genetics and trying to use Indigo to beget more Indigo to beget more Indigo makes the whole world starved of the diversity and value that all different kinds of people bring to the world.

There is more to life than doing math, knowing facts and being able to analyse patterns. In fact, nowhere in physical science or in any religion is it suggested that intelligent beings would shorten the life of the planet and their species intentionally by attempting to become ever more intelligent. Indigo path followers have an essential, valuable role to collect, curate, preserve and pass on knowledge to those who are ready to receive it - but if every person in the world was a librarian, it would be a short-lived one indeed.

Librarians also, as a general rule, are very specialised in their specific field of the library and have a tendency to ignore other colours only engaging with them to the minimum level necessary. This is all well and good if there is a good Yellow government that ensures Green and Red Law is applied by Indigo librarians. But Indigo can never rule over other colours, in other words, scientists should never have the final say over all the people. Yellow rules, and when mixed with Indigo, you get the optical illusion of white because it is such a good combination.

Violet

What is there to say about the nature of the Soul that has not already been said countless times by writers far greater than I?

I suppose I can try, once again, to define it as spirit, not matter or energy as commonly understood. I could try to praise it, and say that to unlock your True Self is the goal of all alchemists and that the Soul is the true philosopher's stone. I could try to hide it behind a merciful veil, and say that God has put within us both free will and a fate spun from the wheel of time together, but we can leave the wheel and become either One with God or enjoy a variety of interesting and exciting Heavens where we can see all our loved ones again. I might even try to tell the truth, which is that the story of the Soul is the journey of self-realisation, and that there exists only God so of course our Souls are of like-mind to such a being.

The self-realised Soul can show you the Way to the Truth and the Light, because such a Soul is already in Heaven - and Jesus says that you shall know the Truth, and the Truth will set you Free.

Afterword

This book is from the alternate universe of Terra-Umi, a large fictional novel universe project under development that explores themes of science, religion, morality, history and ethics through the stories of the many protagonists and worlds within this alternative reality. The novel is still being written, but in the meantime feel free to check out the websites www.loreofthecovenant.com or www.Terra-umi.com for updates and new information.
